

Handheld Launches the New Ultra Rugged PDA Nautiz X7

Ground-breaking, feature-loaded device able to withstand even the toughest outdoor environments

CORVALLIS, Ore.—Sept. 8, 2009—Handheld today announced the worldwide premier of the ultra rugged Nautiz X7 PDA. The IP67 rated Nautiz X7 is a one of a kind, ultra rugged PDA with lightning fast processor and more advanced integrated features than any ultra rugged product on the market.

Handheld's full-featured IP67 Nautiz X7 comes with an impressive 806 MHz processor, Microsoft Windows Mobile 6.1 operating system and an array of advanced integrated features such as 3G cellular phone capabilities, 3 mega-pixel camera with autofocus and flash, WLAN, Bluetooth, GPS, digital compass, altimeter and G-sensor.

The ultra rugged Nautiz X7 weighs only 490 grams, is IP67-rated and passes full MIL-STD-810G testing including drop tests from 1.2 meters and can also handle extreme temperatures from -30 °C to 60 °C.

The Nautiz X7 comes standard with 128 MB RAM and 4 GB built-in Flash storage and a long life 5600 mAh Li-ion battery which provides more than all day performance. The TMR technology (transmissive micro reflective) screen with full VGA and touch display provides excellent sharp and clear resolution even while working outdoors.

The unit comes standard with USB host and has a standard 9-pin RS232 for direct connections with geo-technical and other instruments. The Nautiz X7 also has a SDIO expansion slot for additional storage or accessories like RFID or barcode scanners.

"The ruggedness of the product with IP67 protection and full MIL-STD 810G tests in combination with 3G cellular capabilities, GPS, Bluetooth, WLAN and camera makes the product one of a kind," said Dale Kyle, president of Handheld US. "With the ultra rugged Nautiz X7 we have not only created a product with never before seen combination of features and ruggedness, but also offer it at a price point which makes it easier than ever for field professionals to choose a fully rugged device."

The Nautiz X7 is the third product in the Nautiz product line which also includes the Nautiz X5 and the Nautiz eTicket.

The Nautiz X7 ultra rugged PDA is available immediately and will be shown at the APWA Public Works Expo in Columbus, Ohio, September 13-15. Handheld will be in booth 1906.
